

Evening

Daffodils paint one side of her blue shirt orange lilies and one opening iris the other

Twenty-three children's voices each a sentence in cacophony fall downstairs

Outside white clouds slowly coast east above spring's grass

But deep inside tendons curl as thoughts chase one another